

Defense Force Of 654,000 Now Planned For U.S.

Conferees Agree Upon All Provisions Urged By "Big Army" Men—Private Soldiers To Be Given Instructions In Trades.

WASHINGTON, MAY 13.—A defense force in time of peace of 654,000 men today was proposed in the army bill which senate and house conferees reported to both branches of congress after several weeks' conference.

Tho a compromise, the measure includes all the provisions urged by "big army" men except the "federal reserve." With both chairmen urging its passage, action is expected Monday.

The defense force will consist of an army of regulars totaling in all its branches 206,000 men in time of peace and 448,000 National Guardsmen—800 for each senator and representative.

Can Take Over Plants

There will also be specific power reserved to the government in time of war to take over any manufacturing plant in the country to make munitions, and a board of two civilians and three officers, appointed by the president, is provided to investigate the proposition of the government making its own supplies. This board must report by Jan. 1, 1917.

Twenty million dollars is appropriated for the government nitrate plant for the extraction of nitrates from the air as a basis for munitions making. The surplus may be sold for fertilizer. This plant is to be operated exclusively by the government on a site to be picked by the president.

Training In Trades

Private soldiers are to be given training in trades by officers while in service, but no definite number of hours a month is set.

They are to serve seven years, either active or in the reserves, but they may, if competent soldiers, be dismissed from active service at the end of one year on recommendation of their captain.

Army bands must not compete with civilian bands, nor must soldiers in any way compete for a livelihood outside the army with civilians.

A provision making unlawful the ejection of soldiers from public places on account of their uniform was knocked out of the bill.

Add Officers

The reorganized army will consist of 65 regiments of infantry, 25 regiments of cavalry, 21 regiments of field artillery, seven regiments of engineers, 30,000 men in the coast artillery, two mounted battalions of engineers, 5773 scouts, 6409 men in the quartermaster corps, 7290 in the medical corps, 3387 in the signal corps and—Continued On Page Four—

YOUTH DIES AT HOSPITAL FROM WOUND

Full Charge From Shotgun Lodges In Groin When Gun Is Discharged

TO HOLD FUNERAL MONDAY MORNING

Year Results Fatally For First Hunting Accident Of Dreher

Luther Isaac Dreher, aged 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Dreher, of near Orange, died early Saturday morning at the City hospital from a gaping wound in his right groin made by a charge of shot from a gun accidentally discharged by a boy chum, Virgil King, late Friday afternoon. Members of both families are almost prostrated by grief.

Funeral services for the lad will be held at the Evans' Creek church Monday morning, the cortege leaving the home at nine o'clock. Rev. Kuhlman, the English Lutheran minister, will have charge of the obsequies.

Young Dreher and King had been out groundhog hunting and were using a single barrel shotgun. Late Friday as they were returning to their homes they reached a point near the home of Thomas King was carrying the gun which was in some unexplained manner discharged when the muzzle of the gun was but a half dozen feet from Dreher. The full charge of shot entered the lad's lower right abdominal region and was imbedded in the right groin and thigh.

Twenty minutes after the accident Dr. Kistler, of Newcomerstown, reached the lad and did what he could to staunch the flow of blood and hastened him to the City hospital here where an operation was resorted to as a last means of preserving life. Young Dreher never rallied, dying at 2 o'clock Saturday morning.

The lad is survived by his parents, two brothers, Harry and Bruce, and a sister Bessie, all of the home near Orange.

Ready To Build Swimming Pool

Sufficient contributions have been secured by Fred Timmons, promoter of the idea, to construct the swimming pool for Coshocton youths. As soon as the location is fixed upon work will be begun. The matter was favorably considered by the board of education Friday night. It is probable that the north playground of the Chestnut street school may be selected.

The pool will be 75 feet long and 10 feet wide, having a depth of 4 1/2 feet at the deepest side sloping to the top at the other side. Water supplied to the pool will be aerated and fresh so as to prevent the pool from becoming stagnant. It is estimated that the pool will require about 30 days for its construction.

TO MY MOTHER

The fire upon the hearth is low,
And there is stillness everywhere;
Like troubled spirits, here and there,
The firelight shadows fluttering go;
And as the shadows round me creep,
A childish treble breaks the gloom
And softly from a further room
Comes, "Now I lay me down to sleep."

And, somehow, with that little prayer
And that sweet treble in my ears,
My thot goes back to distant years,
And lingers with a dear one there;
And as I hear the child's amen,
My mother's face comes back to me,
Crouched at her side I seem to be,
And mother holds my hands again.

O for an hour in that dear place!
O for the peace of that dear time!
O for that childish trust sublime!
O for a glimpse of mother's face!
Yet, as the shadows round me creep,
I do not seem to be alone,—
Sweet magic of that treble tone
And "Now I lay me down to sleep!"

Houses Worth Over $2,000,000 Are Being Built

AKRON, MAY 13.—Two million dollars worth of houses are under construction here. When completed they will meet in some measure the house famine caused by plentiful work in Akron rubber factories.

Nearly one thousand dwellings are now being built. It is estimated that by June 1 there will be $2,500,000 worth of new homes erected this year. Because of the shortage, many families have been compelled to live in tents. Rooming houses have hung out signs "No rooms to rent."

Mother's Own Day Observed

A tribute is being paid to mothers, all over the country, today, by the wearing of carnations, and other flowers. Special services will be held in all the churches, by means of appropriate sermons, addresses, readings, and music. Local ministers have chosen timely topics and much attention is to be paid to the observance of the day.

Leaves Sick Bed To Rescue Stock As Barn Burns

Frank Ulman, Spring Mountain, May Not Recover From Strenuous Exertion—Implements, Hay And Grain Burned.

FOUND! REAL USE FOR JUNE BUGS!!

COPENHAGEN, MAY 13.—Despatches from Vienna say that the Austrian fodder committee has offered to pay one kroner per kilo for dried June bugs to be used as cattle fodder, and school children have been asked to collect these insects. Tests show that these bugs contain 39 per cent albumen and 52 per cent starch.

One of the largest barns in the county, owned by Frank Ulman, of Spring Mountain, was totally destroyed by fire Saturday afternoon, at three o'clock. The cause of the fire is unknown, no one having been about the building from 2:30 until the blaze was discovered.

Leaves Bed.

Hay bales had been working on the Ulman farm all day Saturday, and at half past two, having finished their work, left the barn, and went to their homes. At three o'clock Mr. Ulman, who recently underwent an operation for tumor at the Coshocton City hospital, happening to look toward the barn from his house, which is a distance of perhaps a hundred yards, discovered that the building was in flames. He is 72 years of age, and has not regained his strength from the operation, but he rushed to the barn, and, with the aid of one of his farm hands, succeeded in getting all the live stock from the building.

Heavy Loss.

All of the farm implements, eight tons of hay and a large quantity of grain, were burned. The loss, which is approximately $2200, is entirely covered by insurance.

Saturday night Mr. Ulman was said to be in a critical condition, having greatly overtaxed his strength in rescuing his stock from the burning barn. The nervous shock to his system is liable to cause a relapse, and it is feared that his exertions of Saturday afternoon may result seriously.

Motor Bike Is Damaged

Grant Huff, of this city but employed at Alliance, was involved in a motorcycle accident on the West Lafayette road near the McGulre's grove Saturday afternoon about three o'clock.

Huff was riding to this city from Alliance and in trying to make a short turn at a bridge lost control of his machine. The machine was slightly damaged. Huff escaped uninjured. He was able to make temporary repairs and proceed to his home here. The machine was taken to the S. and S. Sporting Goods store where it was repaired.

Big Gain At Warsaw

According to the report of J. J. Fischer, assessor, the assessment against personal property in Warsaw is $22,000 greater than it was last year. J. L. Funk's report for Perry township, filed Saturday, also shows a substantial gain altho the exact amount has not yet been figured.

PLENTY OF BERRIES.

Proving that the people of the East ern states are fond of strawberries, a train made up of nine coaches and running as second Pennsy train No. 44 passed thru here Saturday morning.

Each one of the coaches or refrigerator cars was packed to roof with crates of nice large juicy berries.

The berries were for the Southern markets and were consigned to a large fruit house in New York City.

Youth Meets Tragic Death At Columbus

Mrs. M. A. Van Kannel, of North Third street, and Mrs. John Scott, of New Castle, have been called to Columbus by the death of their cousin, John Lauderbaugh, aged 17, who was killed Friday afternoon when he alighted from a southbound High street car on the wrong side of the track. The accident happened at King avenue and High street. For 25 minutes the boy was pinned beneath the car which struck him, and he could be heard praying, while frantic efforts were made to extricate him. Both legs were broken and his head and body badly bruised. Short funeral services were held Saturday evening. The body will be taken to Mt. Vernon Monday morning for burial.

Germany Plans To Squelch All Plotters Here

THE HAGUE, MAY 13.—The German government, desiring to avoid a break with America at all costs, has taken two important steps in the past fortnight to improve the relations between the two countries.

The German concessions in the submarine matter was one.

A quiet movement to squelch Teutonic plotters and Teutonic propagandists in the United States and anti-American propagandists in Germany has been under way for several days.

Gerard Threatened.

Ambassador Gerard has received scores of letters with threats against his life in the past few days. The writers were inspired by newspaper insinuations that in some way he tipped off the Sinn Fein outbreak in Dublin in advance to the British government.

Some of the writers have mentioned also facts alleged to have been brought out thru the arrest in New York of Wolf Von Igel, former secretary to Captain Von Papen, and the confession of Horst Von Der Goltz, alleged German agent. The the German government has disclaimed all responsibility for the acts of bomb plotters in the United States. Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg believes that some sort of drastic action should be taken to convince Americans that Germany has nothing to do with the plotters' operation.

Condemn Their Acts.

Conferees on this subject have been going at Berlin all this week. I have heard, for instance, that Franz Von Pfitzen, alleged German plotter, will be court martialled if he ever returns to Germany.

Altho officials refrain from expressing any opinion as to the guilt of the accused men, they declare that their acts are without the sanction of the German government or the Kaiser.

Fear Possible Mistake.

Berlin is chiefly worried just now over the possibility that some submarine commander may accidentally torpedo, without warning, a merchant—Continued On Page Four—

Carranzistas Will Execute 73 Villistas

EL PASO, TEX., MAY 13. Rifles of the Carranzista firing squad in Juarez will be used during the coming week to execute the 73 Villistas accused of plotting an uprising in El Paso who will face military trial and there is little doubt as to the scenes which will be enacted at the adobe wall which forms a background for the place of execution in the Mexican town.

Conclusive evidence, from the Mexican standpoint, has been secured against at least half of the prisoners. As three ringleaders have already fallen before a firing squad a similar fate may be expected for the bulk of the captives.

The 73 prisoners were arrested in El Paso, deported across the international bridge, immediately seized by the Carranza soldiers and thrown into the Juarez cuartel.

Carranza officials are anxious to demonstrate to the American government that the Mexican administration is making a real effort to subdue Mexican outbreaks that imperil relations between the two countries and they probably will seize upon the opportunity given by the possession of these 73 prisoners.

No Change In Situation.

The border situation showed no changes today, the usual reports of Mexican attacks on American coming into El Paso.

No trace has yet been found of the bandits who drove Americans from the Polaris mining camp on Thursday.

With General Scott on his way to Washington and General Funston returning to San Antonio, it seems certain that every possible effort will be made to smooth out the international situation and that no haste will be shown in arriving at any conclusion for aggressive action.

things in Boston," responded Mr. Snow. "He had looked at these combinations from the point of view of the public, and I thought his opinion would be more valuable than a regular attorney for corporations."

In Mr. Anderson's report to Washington, Mr. Snow said he considered certain statements erroneous. "I considered it useless to try to get Mr. Anderson to change his mind, but Mr. Brandeis said he considered him quite open-minded," continued Mr. Snow. "So we drew a letter to Mr. Anderson setting forth what we considered the true facts."

Brandeis Writes Again.

Mr. Anderson modified his report. Mr. Snow testified, but the modification still was regarded as erroneous in law and fact. A second letter to Mr. Anderson by Mr. Brandeis and Mr. Snow did not change the former's opinion. The witness said that they did not succeed in convincing Mr. Anderson that the merger—particularly the United Drug Co.—was not a violation of the law. He testified Mr. Brandeis told him he talked to Mr. Anderson personally about the case. Mr. Anderson testified supporting the statement of Mr. Snow.

"Mr. Brandeis tried to convince me that my notion of what the supreme court had decided and what the corporation was proposing to do was wrong," he explained. "We talked rather of what the decisions are rather than what they ought to be."

Bid On Aerial Mail Service

WASHINGTON, MAY 12.—Bids were opened at the postoffice department today on the government's first aerial mail service routes. They will be in Alaska and Massachusetts. If the service proves successful a gradual expansion will follow to other routes where transportation is slow or inadequate.

Seven routes in Alaska will form a connecting link between Seward and Nome, thence to Fairbanks and back to Valdez. The longest route is 358 miles.

The Massachusetts route is from New Bedford to Nantucket, 56 miles and return.

The present cost of carrying the Alaskan mail is high, on some as much as $100,000 a year.

The American authorities are on the alert for signs of uprising on the border. Since the arrest of Jose Morin, Villa leader, they have been waiting for the first signs of new outbreaks. It is said that Morin's plan was for a concerted movement by Mexicans on this side of the Rio Grande.

These conditions were made known to the state department in Washington as it prepared to take up the work begun by Minister of War Obregon, General Scott and General Funston in El Paso.

NOTICE!

All M. W. of A. meet Sunday A. M., at 9 o'clock at M. W. of A. Hall to attend Mother's Day services. By Order Consul.

Women To Take Part In Services

A large attendance of the members of the W. R. C. was present at the meeting which was held Friday evening. Arrangements were made for assisting the G. A. R. in decorating the graves of the old soldiers, on Decoration Day.

Mrs. Laura B. Haight, president of the W. R. C., was presented by Mrs. Aditha McEwell, with a cherry wood gavel, which was made by Mrs. McDowell's grandson, William Parsons, at high school.

Plans were discussed for attending the state W. R. C. convention, which is to be held at Marion in June. Mrs. Sadie Randles is the delegate from Coshocton.

All members of the corps are requested to meet at the City Hall the Monday before Decoration Day, to make wreaths for the old soldiers' graves. A full attendance is desired at the next meeting of the order, which will be held in two weeks.

Expect Orders To Be Carried Out Right Away

In a recent letter to W. A. Sowers, manager of the Coshocton County Telephone company, D. H. Armstrong, secretary of the Public Utilities Commission, advises that the Commission believes that the company should be able to comply with the requirements of its order as follows:

"The completion of the Cooperdale Coshocton trunk line, by May 15.

"The completion of all repair work on the Cooperdale exchange property, by June 1.

"The completion of all repair work on all exchange properties, as directed by the order, by July 1.

"We trust that you will be able to advise us shortly after the first of July that this order has been fully complied with."

The tone of the communication indicates that the commission will brook no "stalling" or unnecessary delay in the carrying out of its orders.

The local Citizens company will also be affected by the order as under the recent agreement with the Coshocton County company management, the local company has exclusive right of service within a radius of five miles.

TO PLANT 7,000,000 TREES.

Extended Reforestation Program in Pennsylvania This Year.

Officials of the Pennsylvania state forestry department estimate that more than 7,000,000 young trees, about half of the number in the state's twenty-four tree nurseries, would be used for reforestation this year, forming the most extended program of the kind ever undertaken by the commonwealth.

The bulk of these trees will be planted on state forestry reservations, on new auxiliary reserves and similar public work, and a large portion will be given free to persons desiring to use them for reforestation. The free distribution will not be for ornamental or shade planting, but only for development of wooded areas.

BUY OLD TIES FOR TRENCHES

British Would Buy Half Million From American Railroad.

An offer of 5 cents apiece for 100,000 castoff railroad ties was received by the Boston and Maine railroad from the British government. Formerly the railroad burned all its old ties, but orders were sent throughout the system directing that they be saved.

It is understood that the British government is negotiating with other railroads with the hope of obtaining a half million ties for use in constructing trenches in France.

Making Opportunity.

I admire the spirit that never gives up. We've got to have it in our daily life. The man without it never will get anywhere. Opportunity will not seek us out. We must watch for it and when it comes we must be quick to grasp it. We must make all we can out of it.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

GET RID OF HUMORS

Hood's Sarsaparilla is the Medicine to Take—Makes Pure Blood. Dry, moist, scaly, itchy, pimples, boils, and other eruptions come from humors, which may be either internal, or acquired thru defective digestion and assimilation.

To treat these eruptions with dry medicine is dangerous. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the old reliable medicine, helps the system to discharge the humors, and improves the digestion and assimilation.

Get Hood's Sarsaparilla from your druggist. It may be confidently relied upon to do its work. It purifies the blood, tones the stomach, and builds up the whole system. It goes to the roots of disease, and its beneficial results are permanent. It sets things to rights in the system. Remember to ask for Hood's Sarsaparilla, because nothing else acts like it and nothing else can take its place.

'The Price Of Happiness'

Envy of the seemingly happier lot of our wealthy acquaintances is one of humanity's commonest failings, and it is this mistaken covetousness that forms the basis for "The Price of Happiness," the new Equitable feature in which Mary Boland will appear as the star at the Pastime today, afternoon and evening.

The heroine of "The Price of Happiness" is a young woman in moderately comfortable circumstances who becomes dissatisfied with her position in life and covets the seeming success of three former girls friends. In a series of highly dramatic scenes she discovers that her friends are paying most bitterly for their apparent success and she returns to her simple home in a spirit of renewed contentment, conscious that hers is the real happiness after all.

'FARM MUST YIELD PROFIT OR DEPRECIATE.'

"A farm that doesn't yield a margin of profit is probably depreciating in value and one that mortgages the future in consuming itself," said President W. O. Thompson of Ohio State University, before 700 farmers in Ohio recently. "A profitable agriculture is the basis of all prosperity. The business phase of farming is going to be the big consideration in the next decade. I should like to see the farmers of Ohio agree pretty generally on putting farming on a self-respecting basis. Every farmer is in business for himself and his community and a good deal of discontent is due to a lack of vision of what his farm is and what it can do."

Miss Hiser Is Champ Speller

Miss Viola Hiser, of the Franklin high school taught by Miss Margaret Krause, and Lester Crawford, of the Clark school taught by Kline Foster, won the highest honors in the Coshocton county spelling contest held Friday afternoon in the public library at Coshocton. Each received a grade of 99. The contest was conducted by district superintendents T. G. Syler, W. H. Everhart, A. A. Barton and J. C. Wright.

Fifty words were pronounced to the forty-two contestants to be written out correctly. As this resulted in a tie, an oral test of twenty-five words was required to decide the winner. In this Miss Hiser graded 100. Crawford missed a capital letter twice and lost out. Miss Hiser will represent the county at the state meet and Crawford will go as alternate. The state match will be held at Columbus on June 2.

The fifty words used in the county spelling match are as follows: Nourish, nicotine, nasal, macadamize, language, lichen, lilies, kerosene, jugular, justice, haughty, hazelnut, heirless, hoghead, hypocrite, gambol, gnat, fascinate, delicious, decide, oleomargarine, ossify, parralelogram, plausible, Pompeii, prerequisite, queue, quintessence, reactionary, reciprocity, reindeer, relieve, resuscitate, sabre, sarsaparilla, sassafras, sebaceous, sesame, silhouette, selish, strawberry, tapioca, unconscious, vaccinate, wheatstone, Cuyahoga, Havana, zepelins, Mediterranean, Schuykill.

EXPECT NEW CORN YIELD RECORD IN OHIO.

With Dewey Hanes determined to raise 175 bushels of corn from his acre this season, and with a greater interest than ever thruout the state among the boys in the 1916 Corn Contest, prospects are that the coming season will see a new production record in corn-growing in Ohio. The present record, held by Dewey Hanes, is 153.7 bushels, which is lower than the boy winners in several other states. For example, Jerry Moore, of South Carolina, grew 238 bushels from one acre in 1910. Intensive methods are used by the boys and the crop handled and fertilized carefully thruout the season. Boys who have not signed up and who wish to take part should get in touch with J. R. Clarke, Board of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

Influential Russian Monk Is Assassinated

BERLIN, MAY 12.—Gregory Rasputin, the Russian monk who is reputed to have exercised great influence over Emperor Nicholas, has been assassinated, according to reports from Petrograd received in Bucubarest, says the Overseas News Agency. Gregory Rasputin, the mystic monk whose bidding the czar it was said feared to refuse, played an important role in Russia.

His rise from peasant priest to confidant of the most absolute monarch of all Europe was miraculous. Possessed of a strange, almost uncanny, power, he began his career in the pastoral hills around Tomsk. Thru prelates he obtained the entree to official circles.

He Ruled The Czarina.

Gossip had it that he wielded almost an hypnotic power over the czarina, and thru her dictated to the czar. He even selected ministers, Naumoff, minister of agriculture, was one of his selections, as was Stuermer, the premier.

Church dignitaries, jealous of his power, and politicians fearing his influence, tried to have him banished. But he held his own thru the most subtle intrigue in all Europe. Nearly two years ago a woman tried to kill him to "put an end to the awful evil wrought by him in Russia by his impostures under the guise of a prophet."

She declared "he enjoyed absolute immunity and had openly and without conscience ruined the lives of young girls."

BOY CONVINCES FATHER BY DOUBLING YIELD

After Oscar Brinkley, of Montgomery County, Ohio, raised an average of 45 bushels of wheat per acre, his father was convinced that his method was just twice as good as the one that they had been using which gave them an average yield of less than half that amount of grain. Back of the 45-bushel per acre wheat field is a story of how the father objected to his son "throwing away" money in buying fertilizer and applying it at the rate of 300 pounds per acre. He tried to convince his son, but Oscar had a vision of doubling the yield by paying attention to feeding the crop, and refused to believe that he was throwing money away. The elder Mr. Brinkley surrendered when the field that had been fertilized yielded 45 bushels wheat per acre.

A Doll's House

By ELINOR MARSH

Train robberies, which had quieted down during the early part of 19—, broke out with renewed vigor in the autumn of that year. One of these attacks was not only well planned, so far as getting treasure was concerned, but in getting away with it.

Jim Charney was the leader of the band that made the attack and chose the field of enterprise by personally investigating different points on the railroad he proposed to operate on. He discovered a cave concealed by thick undergrowth where a party of men might hide. So far as he could learn, no one knew of it. He proposed to rob a train as it passed within a few hundred yards of this cave. A part of the force would make off on horseback while another part with the plunder hid in the cave. A posse would follow those who had ridden away while the men in the cave waited till the excitement had died out and then make off. The robbery was eminently successful. The train was stopped and the plunder taken from the express car. The robbers made off through a wood, dropping the treasure into the hands of four men who made their way to the cave unseen. Those who had ridden away were followed but not captured.

A surprise awaited those who had come to the cave, among whom was Jim Charney, the leader of the gang. He had not been to the cave since he had discovered it several weeks before. On entering it he saw a doll in a little bed and several articles of doll furniture beside it.

The presence of this inanimate combination of china and sawdust caused a commotion on the part of the robbers. Some of them, fearing that their presence there might be discovered, were for moving at once. But Charney argued that the region of the robbery would be filled with persons moved by curiosity, if nothing more, and that any move for the present would be dangerous. If the child came to play in the cave she could be taken in and held from giving information of their presence.

Little Margy Bickford, who lived on the other side of the rise from the mouth of the cave, was the child who had made the place a playhouse. On the afternoon of the robbery she started to go there to get her doll and bring it home. Coming to the rise, she passed over the roof of the cave, where there was a break in the rock that formed it, not sufficient to let in light, but through which sound might pass. The robbers had closed up the mouth of the cave and supposed that they might talk with freedom. At the time Margy was passing over the break in the roof they were discussing whether they should get out or remain where they were. The question was a matter of life or death with them, and their arguments were by no means subdued. Margy, hearing voices in the bowels of the earth beneath her, turned and ran back home as fast as her little legs would carry her. Her mother, seeing that the child had been frightened, questioned her and was told that some men were in her playhouse and would take her doll away with them.

Mrs. Bickford had heard of the train robbery, and it was not long before she began to suspect the truth concerning the voices her daughter had heard in the cave. She went at once to a neighbor and reported the case. Unfortunately most of the men thereabout had gone off after the robbers, who had ridden away, and not enough men could be got together to warrant attacking an unknown number of desperadoes ensconced in a cave, so nothing was done except to station a boy of sixteen to watch the hiding place.

Charney decided to remain where the robbers were only till midnight, then to walk to the nearest station two miles distant and board a train that would stop there at a few minutes after 1 o'clock.
Billy Simpson, who was on watch, saw them leave the cave. He followed them to the station, near which they waited till they heard the train coming, and then went up on to the platform. Billy went to the rear car unseen by them and got aboard at the same time they did. There were four men in the gang, but they took separate seats. They paid the conductor their fare, and he passed on to the rear car, where Billy informed him as to the nature of the passengers who had just got on the train.

The conductor wrote a telegram, which he gave to Billy, instructing him to get off at the next station, five miles distant, and send it, believing that his own motions would be watched by the robbers. On reaching the station Billy stepped off on the dark side of the car unseen, and the train went on. The agent was in bed, but Billy routed him out, and the telegram was sent to a nearby town ten miles distant.
Meanwhile the conductor directed the engineer to slack speed that sufficient time might be given for preparation for a capture.

But few men could be got together in so short a time, and they were disguised, having boarded the train and went on with it. The robbers began to leave it one by one, thinking they were unsuspected. This rendered their capture easy, and they were all seized without a fight.

Little Margy, who had saved $40,000, was adopted by the express company. Billy was given a handsome reward and later a position on the railroad.

DENVER More Than Two Thirds Across The Continent NEW YORK

1819 Miles in 24 Hours by a Hudson Super-Six

An Endurance Record Never Matched By Any Traveling Machine

No man today—if he knows the facts—doubts the Super-Six supremacy. At first the truth seemed like a romance. Think of one new invention, applied to a light six, adding 80 per cent to its power. Then official records began to pile up, certified by the A. A. A. The whole motoring world then had to concede this the greatest motor built. But many men asked, "What about the endurance? Can a motor so flexible, so speedy, so powerful, stand up in years of road use?" So we asked Ralph Mulford to take a stock Super-Six chassis and, under official supervision, show the world its endurance.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN

He took a Super-Six stock chassis—certified by A. A. A. officials. It had already been driven over 2000 miles at speed exceeding 80 miles per hour. It had made a mile at Daytona at the rate of 102.53 miles per hour. And he drove that car 1819 miles, equal to the distance from New York to Denver, in 24 hours of continuous driving—at an average speed of 75.8 miles per hour. At the end of that test—after nearly 4000 miles of record-breaking strain—the car when officially examined showed no appreciable wear.

The best foreign-car record for an American stock car was 1196 miles. The Super-Six beat that by 52 per cent.

The best foreign-car record for 24 hours is 1581 miles. But that wasn't a stock car! The Super-Six beat that by 15 per cent.

How Long Will It Last?

It will be many years from now before we can tell you how long a Hudson Super-Six will last.

But the records we cite cover the greatest strains a motor car ever met. Many a great engine has gone to pieces under far lesser strain. Years of ordinary driving would never tax a motor like those thousands of miles of speed tests. Yet the wear was almost nothing. Certain it is that no man has ever built a traveling machine to compare with this car in endurance.

ENDURANCE PROVED

That was the last question—this one of endurance. In all other ways it has long been evident that the Super-Six stands supreme.

Never has a motor of this size shown anywhere near such power. Never has an engine made to match this in smoothness. Never has a stock car recorded equal performance—in hill-climbing, quick acceleration or speed.

Handsome cars have never been shown. Finer engineering is simply unthinkable, with Howard E. Coffin at the head of this department.

You are getting the car of the day when you get the Super-Six. Every man who knows the facts knows that. And, in view of our patents, rivalry is impossible.

No Need to Wait

It is natural to say, "Let us wait and see" when we meet such radical advancements. We think that nothing can excel in so many ways without falling behind in one.

But not one fact about the Super-Six is left unproved today. Not in one respect has its performance been matched. Not in any way has a rival motor been made to compare with this.

There is no need to wait to get Time's verdict on the Super-Six. The records prove the Super-Six supreme. A half-hour's ride without those records would convince any man of the fact.

Thousands of these cars are now running. You will find them in every locality. And every owner will tell you that he never meets a car to compare with his, in looks or performance.

These are things to consider when you buy a car.

"EVERYWOMAN"

When you hear hard luck stories, consider the case of Walter Browne. His is a human document almost without parallel. Every day men are struggling and failing on worthy undertakings. Some stick to their task, receive the blows of fate with a smiling face, and go down to defeat and death to have another later on take up the work and win the victory. But Walter Browne won a victory and immortality after years of struggles and never knew it. His triumph came in the hour of his death, but he did not taste the sweets of success or know that he won.

Walter Browne wrote the play called "Everywoman" which will be seen at the 6th St. theatre June 2 as a piece of Federation Woman Club. He was a New York newspaper man, a hard-working journalist who spent fifteen hours a day at his desk trying to earn a living for a wife and three children. At night he worked upon a play that he had wrought out of his inner consciousness and which he dreamed would one day solve the problem of his existence. It was hard and grinding work because when his day in the office was done he was tired and felt little like studying the infinite problem of the construction of a drama. For twelve years he labored and when the play was completed he read it with trembling hands to a company who read it and handed it back to him without a word of encouragement.

The telephone is a great thing to cure loneliness on the farm, as it enables us to talk to our friends and neighbors in all kinds of weather and regardless of bad roads. But it does not take the place of actual visiting, and we ought to do more of that. This is true as applied to the young people. Encourage them to visit around as often as possible, and keep your own latchstrings out for others to come and call on your own.

On Washington's Errand and His Own

By ETHEL HOLMES

One visiting the town of Dobbs Ferry, on the east bank of the Hudson and some twenty miles from New York, will find himself in a place that has been called by its present name for so long that no one, except perhaps some of the present residents, knows the date. Doubtless Mr. Dobbs ran a ferry there to some point across the Hudson. He has passed away long ago, but his name remains.

There is another name connected with Dobbs Ferry of far more importance—that is, George Washington. One mounting the declivity leading up from the railway station and following the road leading southward will pass a frame house before which runs a wall to which is attached a tablet stating that it was the headquarters of General Washington during the Revolutionary war.

One day a country lad named Enoch Weatherly, who was a member of the Revolutionary army and had not seen his best girl in New York city for some time, got leave to go there for the purpose of meeting her. Being a patriotic youth, he went to General Washington and, telling him what he was about to do, asked the general if he could be of any service to him in bringing information of the British army, which was at that time in possession of the city.

The general told Enoch that he very much desired to know how many troops were there, how many cannon and whether any preparations were being made for a movement. Enoch promised to gain what information he could. That night the youngster put a load of farm produce in his boat on the river and the next morning started with the outgoing tide for New York. On reaching Spuyten Duyvil creek he turned into it and when he arrived at Kingsbridge, leaving his boat under the bridge, proceeded on foot to the city, some nine or ten miles away.

There was a British soldier at the bridge, but Enoch, being loaded with produce, was suffered to pass, and whenever he was stopped on the way a few eggs or a pound of butter was sufficient to pass him.

New York was then all at the southern end of the island, and Enoch's girl, Becky Bleecker, lived at the lower end of Greenwich street, near where it joins the Battery. He found Becky, and she was delighted to see him, for there was little communication between the American troops in the region beyond Spuyten Duyvil creek and the city. Enoch while in New York was continually going about, counting the guns he saw and estimating the number of the soldiers.

One day he made bold to sketch a redoubt in the region that is now Central park and was observed doing so by a sentry. The soldier called the corporal of the guard and by him sent a message to the commanding officer that a man had been seen sketching the works. By this time Enoch had left, and a couple of men were sent to bring him back. Enoch soon discovered that he was being pursued, and though the men most of the time kept him in sight, he succeeded in reaching Becky Bleecker's home without being arrested.

Becky put him into the great hall clock, he hiding her the memoranda he had accumulated, giving her a kiss at the same time, and she had no sooner taken them than there was a loud rap at the door. She opened it, and two redcoats entered, inquiring for the young fellow who had just come in. Becky declared that they must be mistaken, but the soldiers, having seen him close the door behind him, searched the house. Not thinking to look in the clock, they did not find him. But one man stationed himself at the front of the house, the other at the rear, and Enoch was pinned in.

After they had gone outside Becky returned to Enoch, and he bemoaned the fact that he would not be permitted to take his notes to General Washington. Becky was in terror lest the information he proposed to take away should be captured on him and cause his conviction as a spy. Something must be done before any one came from General Howe and while there were only green soldiers on guard.

but she gave him a scornful look and proceeded. She had scarcely got out of sight before a member of the staff came with a sergeant and eight men and gave orders that no one should be permitted to leave the house. Enoch had heard the door shut after Becky and thought it best to come out of hiding. But, since there was nothing found to indicate that he was a spy, after being held for some time he was suffered to go his way.

Meanwhile Becky, presuming that her lover would not be permitted to go back to General Washington, made her way to Kingsbridge, where she found Enoch's boat and pulled herself up to Dobbs Ferry. Mounting the hill to the house where Washington was quartered, she told him the story of Enoch's and her adventures and handed him the memoranda Enoch had collected.

"When Enoch Weatherly returns, if he does," said the general, "come together to see me."

Enoch returned sooner than was expected, and when the lovers called on the general he directed his chaplain to marry them and bestowed upon them a handsome wedding present.

Hugo's Practical Side.

It may not be generally known that Victor Hugo used to draft the advertisements of his own books, instead of leaving the task to his publishers. His correspondence with his Belgian publishers gives the following example of the great novelist's advertising style: "After the middle ages, the present time: Such is the subject of Victor Hugo's double study. What he did for Gothic art in 'Notre Dame de Paris' that he has done for the modern world in 'Les Misérables.' The two books figure in his scheme of work as two mirrors reflecting the whole human life." An encouraging example to those young authors who cannot make up their minds how much modesty is enjoyed by the best literary traditions.—London Globe.

Teakwood.

Teakwood is used in India for general purposes in house and ship building, for bridges, railway sleepers, furniture and shingles. It is also used much for carving, the Burmese carved teak being especially noted.

Teak has in the past been used to some extent for gun carriages, but it is not at present considered well adapted for this purpose, as it has been found that it splits too readily to be thoroughly valuable in artillery work.

Teak is strongly and characteristically scented, is of oily texture, and the surface feels greasy to the touch. Teak logs when first cut will not float. The wood darkens with age, and after a number of years becomes almost black.

Language Puzzles.

Not alone are the so called Maya inscriptions, found on the ruins in Yucatan, a puzzle to scientists, for those two great nations, the Etruscans and the Hittites, went out of the world leaving archaeologists in a maze. The Etruscans occupied a part of Italy corresponding roughly to what is now known as Tuscany. The Hittites at one time occupied a part of Palestine and united with the Canaanites to resist the invasion by the Israelites under Joshua. The Etruscan and Hittite inscriptions have thus far resisted the attempts of scholars to decipher them.

The Storage Battery.

The correct technical term for the fluid in a storage battery, which is often called acid, is electrolyte. This fluid is a mixture of four and a half parts by volume of distilled water to one part of pure concentrated sulphuric acid. Should it become necessary to replace it on account of loss by spilling or leakage the strength above indicated should be used, but evaporation loss should be made up with a more dilute acid, consisting of ten parts of water to one of pure concentrated sulphuric acid.

HIGH SCHOOL TEAM WINNERS

In a practice game a pickup team composed of members of the Federals, the pottery team and other baseball aggregations about the city was defeated at the Red Sea diamond Saturday afternoon by a score of 9 to 5, the Coshocton Hi boys holding the long end of the score.

MYSTERIES OF EXISTENCE.

Consider the Case of the Apple, the Potato and the Sponge.

There is life here on this earth that is immortal, that never dies, so biologists tell us. A book by Professor C. M. Child of the University of Chicago tells of observations and experiments of the immortal life of sponges, potatoes and apples.

Take the potato, for instance. You wish to grow a new crop of potatoes, and you do not plant a seed; you simply split the living potato, you divide its substance and place the different pieces of itself into different holes in the earth, and the living potato becomes its own ancestor. The potato you eat today at dinner may be a part of the very potato your great-grandfather ate 100 years ago.

And so with the apple. It is perpetuated by grafting a piece of the tree upon a seedling, and that grafted twig, a part of the very body of the parent tree, grows on into a large tree, and a hub of it, again, is grafted on to another seedling, and so on and on for limitless thousands of years, the original tree living always.

The sponge cell splits itself in two and grows two sponges instead of one, and those two divide again and produce four sponges.

The biologists scraped a small sponge from a wooden pile of Narragansett Pier, cut it into small pieces, squeezed the sponge cells from each piece, strained them through fine cloth and put them all into a basin of water. Within an hour the minute cells had collected themselves together again and began immediately to build an entirely new sponge like the mother sponge, of which they were originally a part.

These and kindred facts, as they are accumulated, may throw light on the great mysteries of life and death. Just how it is impossible to see. But the great discoveries have followed the painstaking collecting and comparing of facts that in themselves seemed unrelated and often trivial.

FAMOUS OLD ARARAT.

Ever the Center of the Most Troubled Area on Earth.

Mount Ararat, where there has been hardly a moment's peace since Noah and his ark grounded upon its massive shoulder, is at present the huge boundary mark between the Ottoman empire and Russia.

Ararat is the hub of Armenia, of the original home of the Haik people. It is also the center of what has ever been the most troubled area on earth. Tribes of Europe and of Asia have fought each other here from the dawn of history, and the remnants from the battles have settled as neighbors, hating, despoiling, massacring one another.

Ararat is one of the most impressive of earth's mountains, for it rises sheer to the clouds out of an immense plain.

The dominant mountain is split into two peaks, Great and Little Ararat. Great Ararat rises to a height of 17,000 feet above the level of the sea. Little Ararat, where the boundaries of the Ottoman empire, of Russia and of Persia meet, reaches an altitude of 15,819 feet. Though the snow line here is very high—14,000 feet—the dome of Great Ararat is covered with glittering fields of unbroken white.

A vast wealth of legend surrounds the mountain, which has always deeply impressed the imaginations of the peoples who have wandered, passed or settled beneath it. The Armenian priests long believed that the wonderful mysteries of its summit might never be surveyed by human eyes, and all thought of scaling Ararat was considered almost in the light of sacrilege.

The Armenians have also held that they are the first people after the flood, the immediate descendants of Noah, so to speak; for the first village that Noah founded after the abandonment of the ark was Nakhichevan. So the Armenian thinks that his people were the first race of men to grow up in the world after the flood.

The name Ararat means "high." The Persian name for the mountain, Koli-i-Nuh, means "Noah's mountain." It has been determined by the natives that the Garden of Eden was placed in the valley of the Araxes.

Noah's wife was buried in this valley near the mountains, and grapes are still grown there, whose vines are the direct descendants of vines planted by Noah.—National Geographic Bulletin.

RECORD PRICE PAID FOR WOOL

The sale covered nearly 250,000 pounds.

ALL SET FOR TODAY'S GAME

Manager Pries stated last night that rain could not interfere with the game scheduled for the Red Sea diamond this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with Newark. The diamond is said to be in the best of condition and unless the rain comes in torrents will not effect the playing.

Several old faces will appear in the lineup this afternoon. Wiggins, Gillen and Bordenkircher will be on hands to pitch and Darr, Jones and McCaskey will do the receiving. Infielder McCarron, formerly of East Liverpool, will be in the lineup.

LAFAYETTE HI HAS SOFT JOB WINNING CUP

Without competition from any school West Lafayette won the third annual county inter-high school track meet at West Lafayette Saturday. Ellettsfield, Warsaw and Coshocton high schools were to have part withdrawn a week or so before the event leaving West Lafayette the sole contestant. The meet was staged and West Lafayette high school athletics carried out the track program as arranged. The meet Saturday gave the school possession of the silver loving cup donated by the West Lafayette college to encourage a county track meet each year. Whether the meet will be abandoned hereafter is not yet known but the lack of interest this year does not look promising.

The Popular Sport Coat Is Favorite Garment Say The Feminine Fashion Designers

CINCINNATI, O., MAY 13.—The National Cloak Suit and Skirt Manufacturers association today gave out the style report for fall and winter of 1916-17.

The suits for the coming fall season will be of three varieties, the plain tailored type, the outing or the sport type and the fancier—more dressy—variety; each having its appropriate place and usefulness.

The plain tailored style will be the single or double breasted with some flare to the skirt of the coat, with coat collars, reverse and coat sleeves, the body of the pocket ranging from finger tip length to a length slightly longer.

The outing or sport suits will be varied by the pleats and shirrings at the waist line, held in by belts and half belts—with high collars and simple sleeves—the suit coats ranging in length from finger tip length to a point half way between finger tip and knee lengths.

The dressier suits will contain a great many new features—such as large collars which approximate shoulder cape effects when opened and laid back—high cuffs and fancy cuffs of the bell variety. Some will have vest fronts and partial belts will be featured in other models.

The bodies of the jackets will be more shaped than they have been for several seasons—with the skirts of the suit coats containing considerable fullness or flare at the sides and back.

The length of the suit coat (finger tip and longer) conforms to the lines of the skirt, carrying out the harmony of design so necessary to a truly pleasing effect.

Trimmings will be diversified. Fur edgings, fur collars, velvets, tailor braids and embroidery—these embellishments to conform to the design having in mind appropriateness which in itself is that which makes true style.

The short skirt will continue. Its smartness and youthful appearance makes its popularity universal.

There will be three different shapes in coats this fall.

First the loose coat with its sweeping fullness, its generous sized sleeves, its large collar and larger cuffs. This coat may be cut from a little below the knee to a point slightly above the bottom of the skirt.

Second, the belted coat, some hanging full and loose in the back with belted fronts or sides, others belted all around. This type also will be distinguished by large collars, large cuffs and generous lines.

Third, the shaped coat hanging straight and loose from the shoulders in the back giving a long line from the waist to the bottom of the coat; this type exemplifies the new silhouette.

Other features in coats are the fullness of the cuffs; large sleeves of various sizes, large collars, large cuffs and large pockets.

Buttons and fur trimmings will be the embellishing features of many models.

Refuse To Recognize The Union

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., MAY 13.—By a vote of 417 to 280, the Methodist general conference today eliminated that part of the report of the commission on social service which declared that a preference should be given union labor in all matters affecting employment "in so far as its methods are just and in so far as the rights of unorganized men are not infringed upon."

The partial report of the committee on Episcopacy concerning the effectiveness of the bishops recommended the retirement of Bishops Earl Cranston of Washington and John W. Hamilton of Boston and Joseph C. Hartzell, a missionary bishop of Africa, because they have reached the retirement age, and Missionary Bishop Isalah B. Scott of Liberia and Merri-man C. Harris of Korea who applied for retirement.

Agree On Bishops.
The committee recommended the re-appointment of the other members of the board of bishops. The committee will hold a special meeting tonight at which it is expected an agreement will be reached on the number of new bishops to be chosen, in an endeavor to report to the conference Monday and begin balloting Tuesday.

When the labor union debate was resumed, Wayne C. Williams of Denver, industrial commissioner of Colorado, supported the principles of "collective bargaining" and praised union methods.

Dr. Samuel Plantz, president of Lawrence university, Appleton, Wis., said: "Collective bargaining is absolutely necessary if a weaker individual is to come in contact with a stronger. If we deny this right we endorse the principle that 'might makes right.'"

MOTHER'S DAY

There are different ways, right and wrong ways, of celebrating Mother's Day. There can be a mere lip service today, a sort of idolatrous adulation in the sacred name of Mother, which had better be left unsaid.

The fact that a man or boy or girl wears an appropriate flower is no proof that the day means anything to them. Pretty phrases and studied speeches in praise of mothers have no significance unless they who coin them have a record of love and devotion and service back of the fine words.

The young man away from home who has not written in six months or a year to that yearning mother back in the old town, will make slight atonement for his neglect by wearing a carnation today. The flower is a pretty symbol, but one letter, a single post card, would have done more to soothe the aching mother-heart than all the flowers in the world.

For, no matter what a man's station in life, be he laborer, mill-owner or thief, to some mother he is a son to whom neither rank nor title nor record of crime has the slightest meaning. Above and beyond all else each, to some loving mother, is merely "My Boy!"

No matter what the world may call you. No matter to what heights you may have risen, nor to what depths fallen; to her who used to wash your dirty face, comb your tangled hair, listen with maternal pride to your childish boastings and unfold you in sickness and health with an infinite tenderness and compassion, you are still "My Boy!"

The best way to celebrate this day is by a year of effort to repay, in some small degree, the services of love and unselfishness which every mother gives to her offspring. Turn as best you can in memory to the days of your boyhood—or girlhood—and recall just one of the uncounted instances of a mother's love and a mother's service—and then honor this day in the whole year to come by lavishing a wealth of devotion on the woman who gave you birth.

The mother instinct, maternal care and love and watchfulness, is the nearest approach to divinity this world can know. Since the beginning of time till now there has been no power so great, no motive so all-prevailing as a mother's love. We go thru childhood and young manhood and womanhood with only a dim consciousness of what it is and what it means to us.

We accept as a matter of fact a mother's care in our first years.

BLOWING IT IN

By Walt Mason

Of all the divers kinds of joy that make our journey sunny, of all the bliss without alloy, there's none like spending money. It's well to put away a wage against the rainy weather, it's well, when hard times are ahead, to have some coins together. But when you've suited down a roll of sentences and talents, then, to invigorate your soul, go out and blow the balance. Don't let the saving habit grow, until you are a miser, salt down a part, a portion blows—that policy's the wisest. I like to tiddle to the bank and get some bones in pickle; I like to save, but I'm no crank on saving every nickel. I like to take the extra plunk, and to the mart go flying, and buy a lot of useless junk, just for the sake of buying. I like to whisper to the clerks, "Get busy, boys, get busy!" I've come to buy the whole blamed works, and make you fellows dizzy!" Of all the standard brands of bliss, that fill our lives with money, there's surely nothing equals this—the blowing in of money!

her help and guidance thru childhood and her tender solicitude and devotion in the years of maturity. And it is only when the boys and girls of one generation take up the cares of home building and family rearing that the first faint ray of understanding of what a mother was thru all those early years begins to dawn.

And if, toward the end of life's journey, one of these devoted mothers gets back from her children a tithe of the love and care she gave them in her years of strength, it is the only reward she asks, a solace for every trouble and a balm for every wound inflicted by "the thorny hand of time."

BEAUTY "DON'TS" FOR YOUR HAIR

Don't neglect frequent washing. Grime and grease are not only unsightly, but clog the pores of the scalp and prevent free circulation. Remember frequent shampooing is only beneficial when you use the right shampoo!

Don't fail to use Go-Go-Oil. It is the American version of a famous Philippine product—that which makes the hair of the Filipinos the finest in the world. This shampoo has been prepared of the Go-Go plant and coconut oil to suit American taste, and is recommended by hair-specialists everywhere as the safest, most efficient and agreeable hair-preparation known. Absolutely harmless, economical and easy to use. It keeps the pores healthy and prevents and relieves dandruff.

Don't wash your hair in ordinary soap, the alkali makes the hair brittle and robs it of life and color. Go-Go-Oil is especially good for blonde and gray hair.

Don't fail to rinse the hair thoroughly, and dry it with a slight massage. This, with the stimulating action of Go-Go-Oil, will keep the scalp healthy and the hair will be bright, beautiful and fluffy.

Taking No Chances.

The Kaiser, Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg and Admiral Von Holtzendorff are particularly anxious that submarine commanders take no chances that may involve German with the United States.

If the new orders to submarine commanders could be published they would convince the most skeptical that Germany is as much concerned as America in preventing accidents in the future.

PEOPLES' FORUM

APPOINT A COMMITTEE.

Editor The Tribune:—

Since W. A. Ashbrook has made it known that he will be a candidate for a sixth term in congress, a committee should be appointed to find out his politics. Is he a Democrat, Republican, or just a dodger and trimmer? There is much evidence that tends to show that he has returned to his first love, the Republican party. Last year he bolted the Democratic program and joined the Republicans in support of the Sprague bill which so gerrymandered the state as to give the Republicans seventeen congressmen, and the Democrats but five. All other Democratic congressmen from Ohio used their influence and contributed to a fund for the purpose of defeating that rank partisan bill; but Ashbrook deserted and flocked with the Republicans, and ignored the call of the Democratic state executive committee.

He has been elected five times to congress on a low tariff platform, yet when the Wilson tariff bill came up for consideration in congress he repudiated the platform of which he had been elected and joined the Republicans in support of high tariff duties, and while he voted for the bill on the final vote, he went about his district afterward making excuses and apologies for voting for the bill. His bill introduced at the present session of congress to appropriate $100,000, to erect a monument to McKinley, the high priest of protective tariffs shows his bias in favor of Republican principles. His appointment of Republicans, and near Republicans, to office is further proof that he has deserted the Democratic party. The appointment of a Republican post master at Killbuck is an instance. The Republican politicians have been so pleased with his record in congress in support of their policies that they sometimes have no candidate against him. His chief supporters now are Republicans, and chronic office seekers.

Drawing salaries in the name of the Democratic party does not make him a Democrat; it is the principles that he stands for that determines his politics. His incursion into the Democratic party has been for the purpose of office holding only, not for the purpose of promoting Democratic principles and policies. He has not learned that the tariff is a tax on the consumer. He belongs to that school of politicians, now almost extinct, that believes that the foreigner pays our taxes.

If an unbiased committee finds that Ashbrook's record proves him to be a Republican, then he should be barred from the Democratic primary as a candidate. Let him get office from the party whose principles he supports.

WILL EXECUTE

to restrain their impatience, fearing that large forces of roving Mexicans that have been reported south of the Rio Grande will make fresh incursions into American territory.

Summary Of Situation.

These are the outstanding facts of the situation today:

1. General Porshing's expedition has dug itself in along a 216-mile line of communication and is fully prepared for any attack.

2. Major Langhorne's expedition in the Big Bend country is reported to have again crossed the border. Its operations will be necessarily local, however, owing to failure of expected supplies to arrive.

3. Pancho Villa, the outlaw chief, is again reported to be in Durango, treating with leaders dissatisfied with the Carranzista regime.

If the expeditionary forces are finally withdrawn from Mexico, they will have served at least one good purpose in giving the country a lesson in what lack of preparedness really means. They will have shown that the equipment of the present American army is entirely inadequate.

First at Columbus and then in the Big Bend the soldiers have found their movements hampered by lack of things that should be in the elemental equipment of an army.

Await Scott's Return.

WASHINGTON, MAY 13.—Washington settled down today to a period of waiting in the Mexican situation. Nothing additional will be done, it was officially stated, pending the return to this city of General Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff of the army, who is to make a complete report of conditions as he found them at the border. The only possibility of a change in the plan would be a new raid and elaborate precautions have been taken to prevent this.

In order to get first-hand knowledge of any contemplated bandit action, agents of the department of justice have been massed along the border. They are working thru Mexican agents who keep them advised of all suspicious gatherings. It is realized here that the advocates of the "plan of San Diego" again are very active and it is chiefly to guard against any move by them to invade the United States that the department of justice has acted.

Watching Revolutionists.
Special agents also are watching certain revolutionary leaders in San Diego, Los Angeles, New Orleans, Galveston and El Paso. Orders have been given to arrest all plotters as soon as the evidence will warrant.

MOVIE-GOERS

Motion picture patrons to whom beauty, ravishing gowns, and fine emotional acting make appeal, will flock to the Pastime theatre today and tomorrow afternoon and evening when Kitty Gordon, the English beauty, will appear in "As in a Looking Glass," a five-part World Film feature.

DEFENSE FORCE

45 to 52 members and four major generals and nine brigadier generals are added to the line of officers. All these increases are to be reached by gradual enlargements over a period of five years.

From now on, National Guardsmen must take an oath to the United States as well as to the state, as the principal step in the "federalization" of the guard. This double oath will require them to engage in service outside the United States if the president calls them.

Fighting Is Severe

PARIS, MAY 13.—There was severe fighting on both sides of the Meuse river last night.

On the west bank, the French, after a heavy bombardment, attacked the German positions at hill No. 28, and made further gains.

The French war office in its official statement today, stated that the Germans have again concentrated their infantry assaults on the eastern side of the Meuse.

Two assaults with infantry were delivered on the front northeast of Verdun. One was directed against the French positions in the region of Douaumont, which was repulsed; the other was launched in the section of Thiaumont farm. This later attack broke down under the curtain of fire from the French guns.

The big guns thundered all night on the Verdun front. Northwest of the fortress the Germans concentrated their fire on the line of Avocourt wood and hill No. 304.

Say French Repulsed

BERLIN, VIA SAYVILLE, MAY 13.—Violent fighting was in progress at a number of points on the Verdun front last night, the German war office reported today.

Both on the east and west of the Meuse, the French assaulted the German positions but were hurled back where the attacks did not break down under the fire of the German artillery. The shooting down of two hostile aeroplanes was announced.

Advance In Macedonia

ATHENS, MAY 13.—The German allies in Macedonia have begun to advance their lines and it is indicated that the long expected drive against Saloniki by an army of Austro-Germans and Bulgarians may at last be under way.

Princeton Victorious In Regatta

PHILADELPHIA, PA., MAY 13.—Princeton University won the famous Childs cup, contested for since 1879 in the rowing contests, in the fourteenth annual American Henley regatta on the Schuylkill river held today.

MANY MEN, MANY MINDS.

Idea of "solid comfort" vary. A pipe and a jug and a fishpole is a suggestive combination in the mind of many a man; a book of verses underneath a bough, etc., was the poet's dream (though, to be sure, there was a jug in that vision, too). But let your mind grasp this paragraph from the Manchester (England) Guardian.

"The wants of the men in the trenches are curious and varied, but this request from a university youth at the front is a queer combination of the intellectual and the practical: 'Could you post me each week 'The Spectator' and a small tin of insect powder?'"

It takes so few creature comforts to make a man contented! exclaims the Cleveland Plain Dealer. One pictures this educated young soldier waiting eagerly for each week's mail, seizing his precious packages with trembling, anticipatory glee, and, with his powder tin in one hand and his magazine in the other, running to his cozy little nook for an hour of mental and physical bliss!

LIGHT OF LAST RESORT.

"Miss Serelaf says young Jack Dibble proposed to her last night." "Let me see," mused Miss Cuttem. "They went motoring, did they not?"

"Why, yes." "I thought so. When a woman's features will no longer bear close inspection in daylight, or in the glare of electric light, she can still bewitch some foolish boy by the light of the moon."

Tough Conundrum. If it is really "service" that the man who shuffles around and shamelessly produces a tip is paying for, why do the pretty waitresses take in the most?

BEGUN ON A PHONE

By OSCAR COX

There is nothing so pleasant a girl as to get behind a screen where there is no possibility of being discovered and treating one of the opposite sex as she would never dream of treating him were her identity known. Ralph Harding, a youngster who was, to say the least, by no means bashful, was called to the telephone one day—a party wire—and a soft feminine voice asked, "Is this Mrs. Partington?"

"No; this is not Mrs. Partington." "What is your number?" "My number is 840, party W." "Oh! I've got the wrong letter. I called 840 B. Excuse me." "How much often depends upon a trifle!" "No excuse needed. I assure you. Indeed, I must ask you to excuse me." "What for, please?"

"Keeping you talking longer than is necessary to your purpose. The sound of your voice is pleasant to the ear." A slight chuckle informed Mr. Harding that he had not given offense. The chuckle was the only reply, but it encouraged him to go on.

"We are frequently called to answer calls of 840 B. I suppose it is very easy for an operator to make a mistake in a letter."

"Quite so." "Are you on a party wire?" "After some hesitancy the lady answered in the affirmative."

"Do you have the same letter as I?" "My letter is 'M'." "And your number?" "Again the chuckle, but no other reply."

"Beg pardon. My question was thoughtless." "This was not true, as the girl well knew. If he had the number and the letter it would be possible for him to learn her identity."

"It wouldn't be proper for me to be chatting over the phone with a stranger," said the voice, "if he knew who I was, but since I am unknown I suppose it's no harm."

"How do you know that I'm not a very disreputable person?" asked Harding.

"By your voice. There is nothing that bespeaks refinement or the want of it so surely as the inflection of one's words. I defy any one not born and brought up in the highest class to assume the accent of one of that class."

"Thank you. You are repaying me for what I said to you with interest. Isn't it strange that I can hear you speak as plainly as if our lips were only an inch or two apart?"

"Another chuckle." "But, not being able to see you, I am obliged to rely on my imagination for a picture of you."

"What do you think I am like?" "One of Titian's pictures—fair skin, dark eyes and a tinge of mellow sunset in your hair."

"I'm not like that at all." "Well, then you're a brunette." "There being no reply, Harding asked if he was 'getting warm,' as the children say in hide and seek games. But the lady, who was evidently guarding herself against identification, declined to favor him with a reply."

"I wish you would give me something by which I could find out who you are," he said.

"I am a lady." "And, while a lady may talk to a strange man unknown, she would cease to be a lady if she became known, I suppose."

"Exactly." "Very well, there is a chance, according to your definition of a lady, of your ceasing to be one."

"How is that?"

TURNING ATTENTION TO WAR

Inventors Are Flooding the Department at Washington With Every Kind and Form of Suggestion.

The number of suggestions and propositions which are being received at the war and navy departments from inventors is increasing to a prodigious extent, attaining such proportions that the ordinary facilities for handling such matters are proving utterly inadequate, the Army and Navy Register states. Formerly the war department received an average of two hundred of these communications a year; now they are coming in at that rate per week, with a variety and range of subject corresponding to the numerical product. It has become a serious problem how these inventions shall be treated in a way which shall not give occasion for complaint, the impression prevailing, evidently, that on account of Secretary Daniels' inventions board some new assurance exists for the favorable consideration or adoption of all sorts of inventions. Indeed, a large part of the communications that are being received are impatient protests against the delay in action or remonstrances against the failure to accept suggestions. One correspondent calls attention to his discovery that there is being produced in this country for use in the army a shell similar to that which he "invented" three years ago. The complainant evidently believes that he has been robbed of the fruits of his ingenuity, although, of course, the explanation is that the man invented something which was already in service.

HIS JOURNEY HOME

By EUNICE UNDERWOOD

The morning was very pleasant, but so far all the mornings had been pleasant at this delightful out of the way resort. Mrs. Bradford drew a long breath as she descended the hotel steps. Her physician had certainly been right when he recommended a change of climate. Already she began to feel the influence of the mild air and the long days spent out of doors. As she reached the sidewalk she paused with a questioning smile.

"Where to, Mildred?" she asked. The little girl who was skipping along by her side looked up brightly.

"The plaza, of course, mamma. You can read, and I will play. This afternoon we'll go down on the beach."

It was not far to the plaza, but when they reached it, after passing, with a shudder, the penitentiary on the way, they found that most of the cottages were already occupied. They walked down one of the side paths and came back by the fountain. As they did so Mildred turned suddenly.

"There's a seat that's most all empty," she whispered eagerly.

It was a little off the path and half hidden by the low branches of a live oak. As they approached Mrs. Bradford noticed that its only occupant was a tall young man whose face looked strangely white and eager. He watched them curiously as they sat down, and his lips parted in a friendly smile. Then, as though conscious of impropriety, he got up and began to walk back and forth uneasily. For a time Mrs. Bradford scarcely noticed him, then something peculiar about his step caused her to raise her eyes from the book she was reading. The young man seemed to have forgotten their presence and was walking back and forth with bowed head. Every few seconds he wheeled sharply and retraced his steps.

Mrs. Bradford noticed with curious wonder that he always wheeled at exactly the same points. Then she saw that his left foot dragged behind the other as though it carried a heavy weight. At first she thought he was lame, but even while she was compassionate him he raised his head with a quick, startled movement, and for a time the lameness disappeared and the walk was extended to the end of the path.

Out in the path Mildred was playing with her ball. At length it struck a limb and bounded toward the young man. He picked it up eagerly and half rose to his feet, but, seeing the frightened look on her face, he tossed it back and resumed his slouching position on the grass.

After awhile the ball again rolled to his feet. This time he did not offer to return it. As Mildred approached he looked up with a smile.

"The cover's coming off your ball," he said pleasantly. "If you'll let me I'll fix it. I know how."

"But mamma said I'd have to take it to a shoemaker," she answered doubtfully. "Leather's awful hard to sew."

"Not if you have things to work with," he said quietly. "See here." Taking a small package from his pocket, he opened it and showed her several curious needles and some coarse, shining thread.

"They gave them to me when I left the—place where I learned my trade," he said in a low voice. "I don't suppose I shall ever use them. My folks will not let me do that. But I shall always keep them near me. Some time I may need advice, and this little package will be able to tell me a great many things—a great many sad things which you will never understand, little one," he added gently.

Mildred gazed at him wonderingly, but as she saw the skilled fingers draw the leather over the ball and fasten it securely in place her look of wonder changed to one of pleasure.

"I'm ever so much obliged," she said gratefully. "I'd hate awfully to lose the ball. Grandpa gave it to me." She watched him a few moments in silence, then added with a sudden burst of confidence, "Grandpa lives at our house, and we're going home soon, isn't that right?"

The young man bowed on for a few moments in silence. At last the ball was fixed, and he carefully replaced the needle in his pocket.

"I'm going home, too," he said gravely as he looked her the ball. "I'm waiting for a train now."

"And have you got a mamma?" she asked, with sudden interest.

"Yes, and she's been waiting for me a long, long time. Poor little mother?" the last too low for her to hear. As the little girl was moving away he called her with a sudden gesture.

"I wish you would take this," he said earnestly as he gave her a tiny box of exquisite workmanship. "I made it from a piece of ivory which was found on a battlefield and intended to give it to my sister. You made me think of her."

"But won't she want it?" Mildred objected.

"She is dead," was the grave answer.

The little girl's face grew sympathetic.

"I'm sorry," she said gently, "and I'd like to have the box ever so much. But I must ask mamma."

Mildred ran off to her mother. The young man occasionally looked that way and saw that the child was telling her mother about him, and at last the child returned with a disappointed air.

"Mamma says I mustn't take gifts from strangers," she said regretfully, "but I'm ever so much obliged, just the same."

At length a clock began to strike in the distance, and the young man counted the strokes carefully. When it ceased he once more got up and began to walk back and forth. But now his head was erect and his left foot had lost its dragging motion and on his face was a tender, expectant smile.

Mildred had grown tired of her ball and was watching the water as it fell splashing into the broad basin of the fountain. As the young man approached she looked up timidly.

"Are you going now?" she asked.

"Not for another half hour," he replied. "I would rather wait here than down at the depot." For some moments he stood gazing at her. Evidently her face brought up some memory of the past, for he sighed as he turned away.

A little later Mrs. Bradford was aroused by excited voices. Several figures rushed past her. For a moment she gazed around wonderingly; then she rose and followed. Near the fountain was a group of excited people. In the open space beyond she recognized Mildred playing with her ball. What was the matter?

But even as she wondered came the wild rush of a pair of frightened horses into the open space. What followed happened so quickly that she could not realize it until it was over. Mildred was placed, sobbing, in her arms, and a hushed group closed about the silent figure on the ground.

"It was the bravest thing I ever saw," said one man in a low voice.

"But a sad thing for the poor chap and his people, if he had any," said another compassionately.

"What was it? What struck him?" asked one who came up and joined the crowd.

"The child was playing near the fountain. A runaway team came down the road, making for the place where the child was, all unconscious of the danger. He," pointing to the figure on the ground, "jumped in, threw her from under, and the whole thing passed over him."

"Well, he went to his last home doing a heroic act," said another. "He gave his life for a little child."

Two guards from the penitentiary came across the plaza and joined the group. A moment later one of them gave a few quick directions to a hackman who was standing near.

"It is No. 306," Mrs. Bradford heard him say. "Poor fellow! And he has only been out a few hours! I must telegraph to his folks."

Mrs. Bradford waited until she saw them place the motionless figure in the hack, then walked slowly back to the settee.

Under the live oak she saw something glistening. Picking it up, she found it was the little ivory box.

"Here, Mildred," she said in a low voice, "you may keep it."

The Fatted Goat.

There are curious refinements of cookery among the Akikuyu, an East African race of whom W. Seares Rutherford writes in "With a Prehistoric People." It seems that the favorite animal for slaughter is a full grown ram that has been kept in the dark under his master's bed for three months and fed on sweet potato tops. "He is the only animal in the country that ever gets really fat, and his tail, whereon his fat tends to accumulate, grows to the size and weight of one of his hind legs."

Imprisoned Vets.

Keep your faith in all beautiful things—in the sun when it is hidden, in the spring when it is gone—and then you will find that duty and service and sacrifice, all the old virtues and high aims of life, have just imprisoned in their deepest dungeons. And it is for you to set them free—the immortal joys that no one, no living soul or fate or circumstance, can rob you of once you have released them.—Roy Rolfe Gilson.
